Class History.

EARLY on a bright September morning, four years and some months ago to-day, by scores and dozens, the future class of 1900 marched to its christening. We were not wanted until twelve o'clock, but, as is usually the case, every one arrived at eight except Rourke, '00, who straggled in about half past twelve. During the interim we made a race-course of the first floor corridor, and enjoyed ourselves to our heart's content, until we were given a pencil and a singing book and sent home to dinner. Things went along smoothly, without a single event to break the monotonous regularity of our daily life, until the next April, when the grammar masters sent up all the wisest pupils. How did we ever get along without this aggregation?

It has furnished a class president and a football captain, to say nothing of a flag-pole climber and some sidewalk painters.

We have heard the expression, "Great Scott." Cowdrey prefers Sadie Scott.

"All possibilities are in his hand."—G. P. Hitchcock.

"I am not as thou art."—A. V. Sleeper.

For two more years we lingered along between life and death, "the unobserved of all observers," and monarchs of the third floor. We had the usual election fight in the beginning of our Junior year. After the class and Mr. Bingham had tried in vain to settle it, "the Supreme Court of Appeals" handed down a decision. Then, as the muse of room 26 has graphically put it into verse:

"Bun, Bun, the commissioner's son,
Took the chair and away he run."

J. W. F., Poet.

During the first of that year, various committees chose the class flower, pin, ring, colors and motto. Though all of these are appropriate and show the good judgment of the committee, none deserve special mention except the class pin, which is the daintiest pin that ever ornamented a pupil of the Fitchburg high school. During the Junior year various parties were held by the class, which netted a small financial return for a great deal of work. As this was and is a wide-awake and self-assertive class, we kept the class of '99 continually on the qui vive. As they did not follow Napoleon's maxim of always knowing what the enemy is going to do next, H. H. Woodward found an opportunity to capture the senior class flag which was secreted in Fosdick's house. Then the Seniors rose in their wrath and moved against "Castle Fosdick." They might have made better use of their time by studying their English lessons, for they would have been marching yet and still be no nearer their flag, but they went crying to Mr. Hitchcock, and armed with his august commands they recovered the bone of contention. When the class of '99 graduated we again showed our enterprising spirits. After school, a small crowd of Junior boys bought a can of paint and proceeded to decorate the sidewalks, posts, etc., in the vicinity of the school.

The Seniors became possessed of another and put some "cuss words" after our chef d'œuvre. This gave the teachers an opportunity to show the usefulness of a college chemistry course applied to the ordinary (side) walks of life. That evening St-r-r and K-y-s hoisted the 1900 flag to the flagpole, where it remained during the exercises to the anger of Messrs. Hartwell and Smith and the everlasting disgrace of the class of '99. In our Senior year we were the acknowledged autocrats of the school. We were given a reception by the teachers in November, held various class parties, received more D's than any previous class, elected a red-headed president, had our pictures taken, and part of us graduated and part of us did not.

Foot Ball.

THE opening of the season of 1899 found in the school a dearth of experienced football players. The football team of the previous year had not amounted to much, which was partly responsible for the lack of experience. Besides, the members of the school, especially the class of 1900, were a great deal younger and smaller than in any previous year. What few big men there were in the school knew nothing about football.

Not to be discouraged the Athletic Association voted to put a team in the field and elected L. C. Sheddon manager and W. H. Rourke captain. Training was immediately commenced, though without a regular trainer.

After the first game Capt. Rourke resigned, and Frederick Storer was elected to fill the vacancy. James Hogan then began to coach the team and under training the eleven began to show great improvement. In the Murdock game and subsequent practice four or five players managed to get injured, but rather than cancel the Gardner game the team went up with substitutes in more than half of the positions. Arrived there, we found a team opposing us that from the size of the members would have been supposed to have graduated from high school three years ago.

Though the team did not win every game it played, in no game did it show a lack of science or knowledge of the game, and it never failed to play against a team heavier than itself.

The skilful and daring playing of H. Whitcomb was a feature of every game. Among those who deserve special mention are A. Irish and C. Kendall.

Following is a list of the team and schedule of games:

Winning the Cup.

IN THE spring of '98 representatives from the high school of Fitchburg, Gardner, Leominster, Clinton and Lancaster met at Leominster and formed the Wachusett Interscholastic Athletic Association, to include the schools mentioned.

The first meet was held at Fitchburg on June 11, '98. Fitchburg and Gardner gradually drew ahead of the other schools and it soon became evident that the championship for that year lay between them. "Enfin," Fitchburg won by a score of 61½ to Gardner's 55. 1900 was well represented, as is shown by the appended schedule.

In '99 the meet was again held here. Leominster and Lancaster did not send teams, and though Clinton did, the victory was plainly for either F. H. S. or G. H. S. Thanks to Platts' good work we won again. In this meet 1900 shone supreme, there being but two winners of firsts who were not in that class.

This year training began early in May. We were unable to secure Mr. Brennan as trainer, but Mr. S. M. Nathan made an efficient substitute. The team, excepting Platts, Russell and Kendall, was practically new material, but the men developed rapidly, and the outcome of the meet with Gardner (a dual one as Clinton had dropped out) began to look more promising.

In the class meet held May 24, 1900 won with ease, and the fine showing made by the men raised hope still higher.

The W. I. A. A. meet was held June 2, and Gardner was left far behind, the score at the end standing F. H. S. 76, G. H. S. 55. Early in the day all points probable for Fitchburg were counted up and it seemed that at best we could win by but three or four points. But many of our men showed up strongly, while Gardner lost courage. Platts as usual shone as pointsman, while Russell, Storer, Knight and Keyes took two or more firsts. 1900 outdid itself, winning all but 12 of the 76 points.

Storer won both bicycle races, kindly assisted by the "Kid"; Hardy won the high jump and did well in the 220-yard dash; Russell was next to Platts with two firsts and a tie for first to his credit; Kendall unexpectedly finished second in the quarter, while Dillon did the same in the shot-put, winning the same place won by his brother last year; Knight proved a surprise in the relay, winning his quarter handily; he also won the hurdles; Keyes won the 880-yard run, aided by Miller,

Basket Ball.

DURING the season of 1900 the first basket ball team ever playing under the auspices of the F. H. S. made its appearance. The interest in this sport was awakened by H. C. Whitcomb, who was chosen captain and manager. This choice was justified by subsequent events, for he not only proved to be an efficient captain and manager but by far the best player on the team. After a few practice games were held the following team was picked to represent the school: Whitcomb, Kendall, Fisher, Schragle, Philbrook; Hosmer, substitute. The principal games were played at the Sportsman's Show, where the team succeeded in carrying off the honors in three out of four games. Following is the schedule:

Maynard A. A. 7, F. H. S. 12, Dec. 16.
Orange H. S. 19, F. H. S. 14, Dec. 20.

Base Ball.

EARLY in the spring of the present year the Athletic Association of the school voted to put a baseball team on the diamond. At first the promoters of the project found but little interest in the sport among the pupils. Not daunted at that a few practices were held, and the team picked started in on what proved to be a very successful season's work. As the team went on winning a good proportion of the games played the interest of the school steadily increased, and it is safe to say that the school will never again allow the American national game to be unrepresented. Among those who deserve special mention for notable playing are Whitcomb, Murphy, Darch and Burns. A list of the team and schedule of games is appended:

2. Seven boys absent. Why?
11. Debate. Resolved: "It is advisable to annex the Phillipines."

JUNE.

1. Russell flies into a new flame. (Another girl.)
2. Athletic meet. The high school boys celebrate with a parade in the evening.
5. An epidemic of red hosiery among the boys, but rumor says that it didn't stop there.
8. Circus day. No excitement.
12. Technical class picnic at Whalom.
15. First rehearsal of graduation chorus.
18. Technical examinations at Worcester.
18. Miss Cowles to the French class: "A French girl will not wear a high collar, but she will massage her face and she will rub her neck."
19. Two little mice who were very Greene and couldn't be Moore so, are caught in a trap while spying on the Class Book committee.
19. Well-bred horses have long manes. To Miss McCarty.
25. Miss Elsie Fuller's pictures appear. Chickering evidently knows his business. Each one is a gem.
27. Graduation.
29. Promenade.
Some of the Tech boys graduate well browned from the roasts they have received.

"They almost devour me with kisses."—Burrage.

We Want All Our Marks to be "A."

WE STUDY sixty hours a week to produce work that will please our customers, and leave nothing to be desired. Our course is strong on work for practical, everyday business, we are at the head of the class in the languages, and there is little in the printer's part of any occasion that is not among our electives.

Final Examination.

1. How much time does Philbrook spend studying dictionary?

2. Why does Secretary Lowe sit near dictionary at class meetings?

Hint: To conscientiously perform his duty when Fosdick makes a motion.

3. Who governs the F. H. S.?

Hint: Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Allard.

4. Compute the amount of good material gone to waste in Philbrook.

5. Given that Miller's voice (when he recites in Cicero, so that Misses Greene and Moore may hear) is ten times as large as his body, prove that he is an exception to the law that light travels faster than sound.

6. Estimate how large Platts might have been if it wasn't for the weight of his name.

Advice to Juniors.

Never get into your seat until ten seconds before the fifteen minutes bell.—By Rourke, '00.

Never sharpen a pencil on the floor; sharpen it on a block and throw it on the floor.

Never call a teacher down to his face. Do it behind his back.

Never whisper unless you are alone or with somebody.

Chew nothing but the best gum during school hours.

While in school never fight with a teacher. Go out of doors, there is more room there.

Have nothing to do with Miss Blanchard. You may have to march with her sixth hour cadets.

Avoid congratulating Cobb on any possible engagements; it's — well, it is not wise.

Don't go sightseeing on any of our high buildings; it is not nice. If you do, take an ice pick, and ask Anna for manner of using the same. For further particulars apply to Miss Damon, '02.

Never allow yourself to be appointed on a Class Book committee. You will regret it.—By Knight, '00.

Familiar Quotations.

The Sleighride.

At seven they sat as strangers sit,
With half a seat between;
At eight the two much closer drew,
As friends they then were seen;
At nine the moon shone down upon
The pair a foot apart;
At ten her face with gentle Grace
Was nestled next his heart.

“For thee I dim these eyes and stuff this head
With all such reading as was never read.”

—To Miss Allard.

“His absence from his mother oft he'll mourn,
And with his eyes look wishes to return.”

—Fear for Roy at Harvard.

“There swims no goose so gray but soon or late

She finds some honest gander for a mate.”

—Consolation for Miss Fairbanks.

“Restore the lock!” she cries, and all around
“Restore the lock!” her father's cries resound.

—[Miss Hutchinson's loss of hair. Dedicated to Woodward, '00.]

“Well, the links are broken,
All is past;
This farewell when spoken
Is the last.”

“And still they gazed and still their wonder grew

That one small head could carry all he [thought] he knew.” —Bingham, '01.

“'Tis the voice of a sluggard;

I hear him complain,

‘You have waked me too soon,

I must slumber again.’”

—F. P. Lord.

“If chance a mouse creeps in her sight,
She finely counterfeits a fright,
So sweetly screams if it comes near
It ravishes all hearts to hear.”

—Miss Elizabeth Alvira Harding Sleeper.

[NOTE.—This, however, is not strictly true, because there is one “Mouse” of whom she is particularly fond.]

A High School Idyl.

There's a thin, long-faced man,

Which is Cobb,

Wears the tightest pants he can,

Don't you, Cobb?

Oh! he's lanky but he's wise,

He's a wonder for his size,

And with specs on both his eyes,

He's a sight!

Now when he gets right mad,

(That is, Cobb),

It's a sight that makes you sad,

Our Cobb.

Oh! he'd chill you with a look;

He's a master of the book,

What he don't know—ask the cook,

Can't they, Cobb?

"She loves to wind up her mouth and let it go again."—F. H. S.

Card from the Editors.

WE TAKE this method of expressing our sincerest thanks to Mr. Frank Allen, F. H. S. 1903, for the drawings in this book. The cover designs, as well as those in the book are from his pencil, and we feel a gratitude too deep for words for the time and care he has spent on them. With Frank in the senior class in 1903 we expect that their book will be almost as good as this. We also desire to thank our advertisers, without whose aid we could not have printed this book, and all others who in any way assisted us, especially the printers for much good advice, which we did not always follow.

Yours with gratitude,
THE CLASS BOOK COMMITTEE.

Class Song.

Words by MISS LILLIAN A. RICE.

Amid the bright blossoms of June we have met
To recall our past pleasures so dear,
And although here to-night sad farewells we must say,
May the future be faced without fear.
If barren the path of plain duty e'er seem,
Or mere pleasure allure us astray,
May we onward and upward still strive to attain
The heights to be won by who may.

Not always with laurel is true success crowned,
Nor the sweetness of fame by all known,
But the value of effort is waiting for all,
And by idleness fruit is ne'er grown.
Then under our banners of crimson and white,
Which for conflict and purity stand,
May we ever courageously live our own lives
And with boldness obey or command.

TUNE: "Fair Harvard."

1900.

The school is filled with sorrow,
And naught is heard but woe,
Because the class of 1900
From F. H. S. must go.

Well may the sounds of weeping
Echo from every heart,
For with this marvelous class,
Teachers and scholars must part.

And throughout the coming ages,
About these halls will throng
The memories of 1900,
The noble class that's gone.
